GREATLY EXPANDED ACCESS TO MODERN HISTORY

Now with three distinct and extensive collections, The Making of Modern World series offers expansive new research opportunities with the release of The Making of Modern World Part III, 1890-1945.

In addition, The Making of the Modern World Parts I & II are now available on the Gale Primary Sources platform for greater usability. With analysis tools such as term frequency and term clustering, students and scholars can now intuitively discover new historical connections—improving the end results. In addition, access to the full text of documents provides countless new digital scholarship research applications.

Like building blocks, these three collections form a substantial resource for researchers, spanning six centuries of human progress dating from the mid-fifteenth century to the mid-twentieth—and covering a wealth of topics ranging from the socio-economic to the political and beyond.

ADDING TO THE STORY OF PROGRESS

An extensive amount of materials coming out of copyright enabled the creation of The Making of the Modern World, Part III: 1890-1945, creating new opportunities for researchers. Relevant to both current events and today's political landscape, this collection adds breadth and depth to The Making of the Modern World series.

Invaluable for understanding the rise of empire and the projection of European power to the emergence of capitalism and communism, these collections document the dynamics of Western trade and wealth that shaped the world.

The Making of the Modern World, Part III expands the collection into the twentieth century, providing coverage of World War I, The Great Depression, and World War II. This collection offers insights on agriculture, finance, colonization, commerce, manufacturing, and more.

With over 11 million pages of content, The Making of the Modern World, Part I fully documents the dynamics of Western trade and wealth that shaped the world, from the last half of the fifteenth century to the mid-nineteenth century.

A comprehensive resource for the study of nineteenth century economics, The Making of the Modern World, Part II traces the rapidly changing economies of nineteenth-century nations, allowing researchers to better evaluate the profound impact of the Industrial Revolution.

“What The Making of the Modern World permits scholars to do more effectively is paralleled by what it encourages teachers to do. Imagine a lesson plan for a class in comparative slavery. The number of textbook treatments of the subject seem boundless, but they all reference primary documents that are largely out of reach for students in classrooms. Manuals written for plantation managers tell how things really were, but they are mostly the province of rare books collections. The Making of the Modern World brings them into classrooms, puts them into the hands of students.”

—John McCusker, Ewing Halsell Distinguished Professor of American History and Professor of Economics at Trinity University, San Antonio, Texas

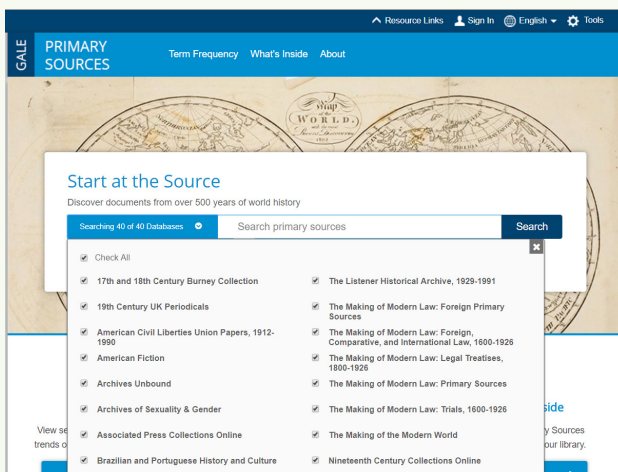

THE SEEDS OF GLOBALIZATION

The Making of the Modern World, Part III: 1890-1945 carries Gale's celebrated digital collection into the middle of the twentieth century. This collection is comprised largely of monographs and periodicals from the prestigious Goldsmiths' Library of Economic Literature which is held at the Senate House Library of the University of London, offering transnational coverage in an area of vital interest to historians—political economy. The archive supports research on essential topics, such as world trade, finance and capital formation, transportation and the growth of cities, industrialization, imperialism and colonialism, socialism, labor and poverty, and other areas of study.

The Making of the Modern World, Part III partially overlaps chronologically, but does not duplicate the title list in Part II—and contains materials that are only now out of copyright and could therefore not have been included in the previous parts of the series. With full-text search capability of rare, digitized primary source materials, this expansive collection provides researchers with a new perspective on the rise of globalization.

TOPICS INCLUDE:

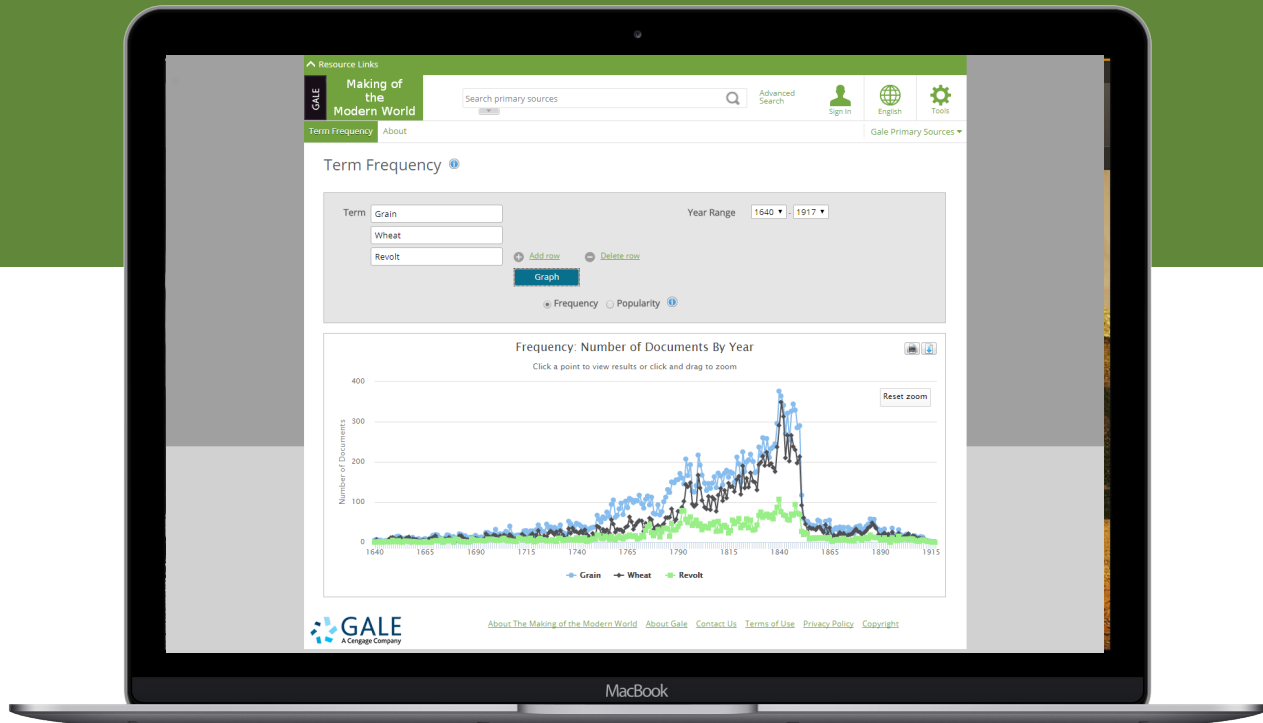

- Expansion of communism and capitalism
- Production and trade as it relates to the role of the state
- Immigration's impact on our economy
- Temperance movements
- Emergence of the middle class
- World War I and II

All three The Making of the Modern World collections are now available on a more modern interface that delivers an improved user experience which allows:

- Unlimited page download
- Term frequency and additional text analysis support
- Plain text available to support Digital Scholarship
- Downloading and printing entire documents
- Features Term Frequency and Clustering

Part III features all-new scanning, not created from microfilm, making documents easier to read.

EXTEND THE REACH OF YOUR RESOURCES

Workflow tools help accelerate tedious aspects of research and streamline the process of publishing new insights.

Analytical tools help researchers analyze thousands of documents at one time to make connections and gain insight that would not be possible through traditional close reading.

Support Interdisciplinary Scholarship

Provide supplemental course material that stretches across many disciplines, such as political science, gender & sexuality studies, philosophy, literature, theater, history, and area studies.

Solution for Research at All Levels

The online platform features an extensive offering of introductory material as well as in-depth, critical analysis.

Entry-Level Table of Contents

Review the chronological contents of a volume of literary criticism with the click of a button. The table of contents enables users to jump to relevant criticisms based on their research needs.

Citation Tools

Integrated directly into the user's workflow, formatted citations can be easily exported from single or multiple documents to services like EasyBib or NoodleTools. MLA, APA, and Chicago-style citations are supported.

Visual Search Tools

Expand and refine search results through Term Clustering and Term Frequency, enabling users to discover the context of search terms and uncover hidden connections.

HISTORY THAT SHAPED OUR WORLD

The Making of the Modern World, Part I: The Goldsmiths'-Kress Library of Economic Literature, 1450-1850 offers new ways of understanding the emergence of modern economics and other social sciences. It is the most comprehensive collection in existence for the study of early economic, political, business, and social history; and ideal for researching the literature of economics from this period.

This collection traces the development of the modern Western world through the lens of trade and wealth—the driving force behind many of the major historical events during the period (1450-1850). With full-text search capabilities on an abundance of rare books and other primary source materials, this resource provides unparalleled access to more than 61,000 monographs and 466 serials. In more than 11 million pages, it focuses on economics from a variety of angles, offering perspectives from political science, history, sociology, and special collections on banking, finance, transportation, and manufacturing.

The Making of the Modern World, Part I is fully cross-searchable with Parts II & III. Because of its multi-language, multi-cultural character, the collection responds to research needs on a comprehensive level. Languages include French, German, and more.

TOPICS INCLUDE:

Economics	Philosophy
Industrial Revolution	Social conditions
Global colonization and empire building	The role of the state
The emergence of mercantilism	Commerce
Triangular trade and the transatlantic slave trade	Pan-Atlanticism

“... [The two rare book libraries] are comprehensive in their coverage; they contain, in some cases, the only known extant copies of certain works, and they include numerous books of fascinating provenance—books from the personal libraries of such personages as Adam Smith, Lord Sheffield, David Ricardo, John Locke, Jeremy Bentham, William Wilberforce, Robert Owen, Sir Robert Peel, William Wordsworth and Karl Marx.”

– Nathan Rosenberg, Professor of Economics at the University of Wisconsin; Editor, Journal of Economic History

THE MARCH TOWARD MODERNITY

The Making of the Modern World, Part II: 1851-1914 traces the progress of the nineteenth-century nations' rapidly changing economies. Comprised primarily of monographs, reports, correspondence, speeches, and surveys, this collection broadens Gale's international coverage of social, economic, and business history, as well as political science, technology, industrialization, and the birth of the modern corporation.

In page after page of primary source documents, researchers can evaluate the profound impact of the Industrial Revolution on the political and social conditions of nineteenth-century workers, factory owners and national economies.

TOPICS INCLUDE:

Products (e.g. cocoa, coffee, tea, cotton, leather, grain)

Railroads

Women (in business, the labor movement and women's rights)

Industry and trade, including the evolution of business enterprises

Socialism and social movements, including communism

Political theories, including economic policy

Economic disaster and recovery

War and the military

Colonialism and exploitation of natural resources

Government regulation and protectionism

Workers' rights and the evolution of unionism

REVIEW

"Taken together, MOMW I and MOMW II represent very significant and extensive collections combining standard works in multiple editions and unique primary source materials. The interface is straightforward and easy to use . . . Another benefit to the MOMW collections will be cross-collection searchability with other Gale collections, including ECCO and especially NCCO, since the publisher will be loading these collections on the Gale Primary Sources platform."
