

17th and 18th Century Nichols Newspapers Collection

John Nichols
(1745–1826)

Number of titles

Over 300

Number of pages

Over 150,000

Year of earliest document

1672

Year of last document

1737

Number of years covered

65

Find out more at www.gale.com/nicholsinfo

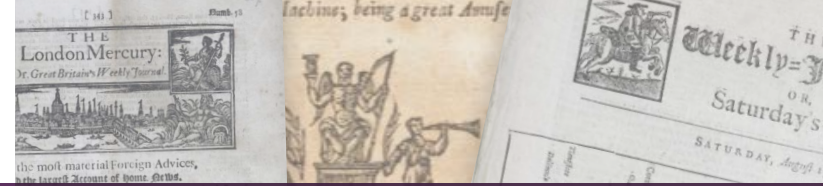

John Nichols began collecting newspapers around 1778, using them as part of his own scholarship, as well as making them available to other scholars.

'John Nichols' by Charles Theodosius Heath
© National Portrait Gallery, London / cropped from original

Gale Primary Sources
Start at the Source.

 GALE
A Cengage Company

17th and 18th Century Nichols Newspapers Collection

The Nichols Collection was purchased by Oxford University's Bodleian Library in 1865, and has never been digitised. Part of the collection has been previously available on microfilm, but the new 17th and 18th Century Nichols Newspapers Collection digitised archive provides the whole collection for the first time, including never before digitised newspapers.

Many early English newspapers have otherwise been lost, making this collection an invaluable resource for a range of research topics, forming a comprehensive mine of political and religious information of the period, and of the contemporary reactions to it. Revolution, war, gossip, trade and adverts for peculiar medicines are all contained in these pages.

Among many highlights, this collection includes coverage of:

- The Glorious Revolution of 1688, including James II's General Pardon and calls for loyalty from his subjects
- The deaths of monarchs from Charles II to George I, as well as reports on the death of James II in France in 1701
- Movements in international politics, such as reports on the signing of the Treaty of Utrecht and Queen Anne's speech to Parliament

A multi-disciplinary resource, with content relevant to:

- Western European Studies
- English Language and Literature Studies
- Gender and Women's Studies
- Humanities/Humanistic Studies
- Social Sciences

Rich content, richer functionality

The 17th and 18th Century Nichols Newspapers Collection is one of many resources available on the Gale Primary Sources platform, which offers a ground-breaking research environment. The combination of uniquely rich, full-text primary source content, dependable metadata, and intuitive subject indexing, is further enriched by innovative workflow and analytical tools.

Features

- Intuitive interface
- Fully text searchable with hit-term highlighting
- Limits by (amongst others) document title, author and date
- Searches by article type
- Raw text available for text mining purposes
- Results can be downloaded, printed or emailed
- Citation tool, saving time
- Save searches, results and annotations between sessions
- Export documents as PDFs
- Fuzzy search – low, medium, high

For more information on the history, content and features visit:
www.gale.com/nicholsinfo

