THE COLD WAR: ENDED, ENDING OR PAUSING
A Surreal Struggle Fed by Mutual Fear

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

There have been longer wars (not many) and bloodier wars (many) and wars that made more sense (some). But in the history of nations, I can't think of one more strange and more frightening than the Cold War now ended, ending or pausing.

For nearly half a century, nearly a fifth of the life of the American republic, two giants have terrified each other astride a world they held in thrall with their power and enmity.

One feels it stunted everybody's growth. Revolutions, other wars, coups, national development were not allowed to occur naturally in the spontaneity of history without the Cold War imposed on them.

It cost the United States more than two world wars combined and left us short of good schools, hospitals, roads, clean air. It cost the Soviet Union mightily in food on the table and places to live.

We still don't know precisely when it started or how we will know when it ends. Other wars had shape. Not this one.

This didn't start with a shot heard around the world. It is not ending with a cease-fire, prisoners exchanged and a peace treaty signed clearly showing the winners and the losers.

In the Cold War, the antagonists have yet to agree on a treaty to end the war in Europe in which they were allies. How soon can we expect them to end a war in which they are enemies? We can't know where we are going or when we will be there but, it seems to me, the current turn in the road is a good place to find out where we have been, which is the subject of my AP Newsfeatures report for Sunday, Aug. 20. It's like nowhere we have been before.

Now in the bonhomie of glasnost, former enemies are comparing notes, new information is forthcoming and, in the deepening perspective, a picture emerges of a surreal struggle fed by mutual fear and mutual misperception.

Now we find a former secretary of defense telling a Soviet official "you are just as stupid as we are" in weapons buildups. "Before, more than you," replies the smiling Soviet. "Now, less than you."

And a former secretary of state saying both superpowers "pushed our clients (in Africa) so hard we couldn't deal with problems in a rational way."

And a Soviet official saying, "Each side regarded the other as waiting for the right moment to spring an ambush." Each was mistaken.

Now we are told that: At one time the KGB became so rattled by Ronald Reagan's "evil empire" rhetoric it issued a worldwide alert that the United States might be about to launch a first strike. Two of the biggest operations, American and Soviet, in Iran and China, were monumental failures. Just before the Missile Crisis, Nikita Khrushchev sent 45,000 troops hurrying toward Cuba equipped with parkas and skis. President Jimmy Carter, on a visit to the Pentagon, asked, plaintively, "Will somebody please tell me why we need more than 200 intercontinental nuclear weapons?" Now we can better understand what Khrushchev meant when he compared the Cold War to two "blind moles" pulling at opposite ends of the "rope of war."

SOVIET PREMIER NIKITA KHRUSHCHEV ...Addressing United Nations in 1960.
