Operators AND, OR, NOT Proximity Nesting Special Characters Quotation Marks Wildcards Ignored

Proximity

Use Proximity Operators to Define Distance Between Terms

Proximity operators (Nn, Wn) can be used to tell the search engine how closely terms must be to each other within a document. They operate like the AND operator in that both terms must be found.

Use Nn to find terms when order doesn't matter

The Nn (near) operator finds terms n words apart in either direction of the first term.

- memory n5 repressed* finds documents that contain memory and repressed within five or fewer words of each other.

Use Wn to find terms after the first

The Wn (within) operator finds the second term within n words after the first.

- shared w3 values* finds documents that contain the term values within three or fewer words after the term shared.

The Making of the Modern World, Part I, 1450–1850

The world of 1450 was one steeped in long-standing traditions, with most cultures holding to religious and intellectual visions of unchanging human cycles. Though the peoples living in Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, and the Americas were largely or completely ignorant of one another, they all lived in societies that appeared fixed by God or the gods. All of these societies were agricultural, highly contingent on environmental factors, often within a single bad harvest of famine, rigidly hierarchical, barely literate or entirely lacking in a written culture, and mostly adhering to dogmatic religious beliefs not open to question. Most societies had childhood mortality rates of 50 percent, with the vast majority of the people on the planet lucky to make it to the age of forty and highly unlikely ever to travel more than twenty miles from their place of birth. A fifth-century peasant from nearly any place in the world would recognize key continuities in that same society one thousand years later. Few people questioned social structures or cultural ideas, and fewer still thought that the world would change until some divine figure brought this earthly cycle to a close.

But signs of change were evident, especially in Europe. Starting with the rediscovery of ancient Greek and Roman texts, a vaguely defined series of cultural explorations called the Renaissance excited the continent's intellectuals. Even more significantly, in 1450, in the German city of Mainz, Johannes Gutenberg started publishing books using movable type. Few inventions so totally transformed the world as did the printing press. This collection begins in that pivotal year precisely because the printed book made its public appearance and changed everything. It was also in 1450 that a series of French military victories drove the English from their last holdings in France, setting the stage for the Battle of Castillon that effectively ended the Hundred Years' War. The following year, Cristoforo Colombo, known to history as Columbus, was born in the Italian city of Genoa. Across the Atlantic, the Inca consolidated their empire and begin work on their Andean citadel of Machu Picchu, while further north Moctezuma I led the Aztec people in creating the powerful Triple Alliance. And then in 1453 came a terrifying reminder to the people of Europe that failure to change could lead to the destruction of their way of life. In that year, the Muslim Turks captured Constantinople, putting an end to the thousand-year-old Christian Byzantine Empire.
